From the climatic point of view, we have six seasons – summer, rainy, autumn, late autumn, winter and spring. These seasons come one after another in a regular cycle. Each season has its own beauty and features.

Summer begins from the third week of April and continues up to the end of June. It is the hottest season of the year. The sun sometimes seems to scorch the earth. Most of the ponds and canals dry up. During this period the days are longer than the nights. Kalbaishakhi visits now and then. It comes with lightning, thunder, terrible wind and downpour. But fruits of different kinds and sizes such as mango, lichi and jackfruit ripen during this season and create a festive look among the rural people.

The rainy season extends from the end of June to the end of August. These are the months of rain. Tanks, canals and ponds, get filled up. Sometimes, the rain is so heavy that it causes floods damaging crops and properties.

Autumn comprises the months of September and October. The sky gets clear. Paddy is harvested in this season. After autumn, late autumn comes. Paddy ripens in late autumn. Dew drops fall on the grass and leaves glittering like pearls in the morning sun.

Winter begins in November and lasts till the middle of February. We get better supply of fish and different kinds of vegetables in this time.

Spring extends from the middle of February to the second week of April. It is the season of greenery and flowers. It is also called the king of seasons.

Dear Suborna,

Hope you are well. I am writing you about the summer season.

There are six seasons in our country. They are summer, rainy, autumn, late autumn, winter and spring. These seasons have their own beauty and features. Summer is the hottest of all seasons. It begins from the third week of April and continues upto the end of June. During summer violent storm Kalbaishakhi visits now and then with lightning, thunder and downpour. Different kinds of fruits are found in this season.

That's all in short. No more today.

Your loving sister,

Lipi
